Both John Jones and William Rees are men of good standing and known locally in the area. They both come from good families and are both of good financial standing. They rented the quarries from the Cawdor estate in 1953 after it had been closed for four years. It was their intention to bring jobs back to the local area and provide lime which was much needed by local farmers. When the quarries then became a sustainable business, Jones and Rees decided to sell to move onto other ventures.

Jones is an experienced accountant who has handled various business accounts for many years. There has been no question of his previous Rees is a family man, married with five children. He is reliable and hard working and attends church twice on Sundays.
