

Teacher notes

The 'Discovering the legacy of the first World War in Pembrey' project was funded and supported by Cadw, Welsh Government's historic environment service and Heritage Lottery Fund. The project was led by Dyfed Archaeological Trust, who would also like to thank Carmarthenshire County Council for their generous support. The project has raised awareness of the First World War archaeology within the park. It has involved local people and school children in discovering archaeology and understanding the significance of the site. A mobile exhibition and leaflets have been produced to be used locally.

The project has also produced this education resource. During the project a local secondary school visited this fascinating site and took part in a variety of classroom activities relating to their visit. It is hoped that this educational resource will be used by schools to encourage and enable school children to discover its historical significance and broad educational potential.

The resources have been developed by a qualified teacher to work with key stage 2 and key stage 3, with as many links to the curriculum as possible. Some of the resources may, however, need to be adapted to suit your class's needs and age group.

Before teaching any of the units it is advised that you visit the Country Park to familiarise yourself with the site.
